

CRIMSON DAWN

Newsletter of Ananda Marga New York Sector

MARCH 1988

Dear Brothers & Sisters, Namaskar!

Yes! This is CRIMSON DAWN. After a long rest, we decided to resurrect our old friend, in the light of BA'BA's New Year Vani:"..That which is ever-true, which is eternal, is destined to be illuminated with the rise of the Crimson Dawn. Be ready for that grand ovation, that new Crimson Dawn in every house."

And since the New Year, so much good news and so many new programs from BA'BA' have been pouring in day by day; for too much to be communicated in a few pages each month.

In this issue we'll bring you up to date on some of the latest development in the growing Ananda Marga movement in New York Sector and around the world. We welcome your feedback on its form and content and look forward to getting your input for future editions. With your co-operation we'll make our new Crimson Dawn a shining expression of our multi-faceted movement.

Thank you!

Yours,
Dada Shubhamayananda
(Sectorial Office Sec.)

"When the underlying spirit of humanism is extended to everything, animate and inanimate, in this universe - this I have designated as Neo-Humanism. Neo-Humanism will elevate humanism to universalism, the cult of love for all created beings of this universe".

ECOLOGICAL GARDEN

With the increase of our technological powers over the past century, we human beings have cast a vast shadow across land and ocean, through air and soil. We have raided every ecosystem on earth: we have ravaged the tropical rainforests and turned the soil into desert, and hacked millions of creatures to death for their skin, bones tusks, feathers, horns, and meat.

No generation before us has had the capacity to alter, as we are now doing, the climate, diversity of plant and animal species, and the amount of soil and forest on earth: and we are, at an accelerated rate, rupturing the web of life and destroying our world.

We tolerate only those animals and plants which have utility value for us - that serve our economic purpose - and the rest we mercilessly destroy as if they had no right to exist at all. 10% of all plant species are threatened: we are losing one species a day. By 1990 the rate will increase to one an hour: 25,000 species of plants are threatened with extinction, and with each of them, 20-40 other species which are dependent on each of those plants for survival, may disappear.

This wholesale slaughter of creatures - extinguishing in a few years, or a few hours, what evolution has built up over billions of years - is tearing gaping, unmendable holes in the fabric of life. We are destroying species at 400 times the natural rate of extinction; now the rate of extermination has outrun the rate of new species evolving. We are disrupting the very process of evolution itself.

Yet every creature, whether or not it has utility value for us, has existential value - the inherent right to exist, which humans have no right to destroy. As P.R. Sarkar, the propounder of the progressive new philosophy of Neo-Humanism, has said, "All creatures have their inalienable existencial value - all are the children of Mother Earth. The only difference is that human beings are aware of their own existencial value, while other creatures are not.

To reverse this dangerous trend destruction and to preserve and nurture our younger brothers and sisters in the family of life, a new ECOLOGICAL GARDEN is being established in one of the most geological ancient and historically rich areas of the world: the land of Anandanagar, in Purulia, West Bengal. This plant and animal sanctuary (called PARIVESH SAMVARDHANA KA' NAN in Sanskrit, or PASAKA) is, as its name implies, "a garden for the development of all living beings." In a protected area of about 1½ kilometers, rare plants will be nurtured and endangered animals will be cared for and provided with the necessary food, shelter and comfort for their growth and development - including protection from heat and cold and ponds and salt licks. Here plants and animals will be ecologically integrated in a harmonious tapestry of life.

This Ecological Garden at Anandanagar is situated in the midst of a huge residential educational complex of kindergartens, primary and secondary schools, and colleges which provide the highest standard of education, not only to brilliant students from all corners of India, but also to deserving trival or indigent students from the surrounding areas. Thus this beautiful garden of loving care, filled with a colourful variety of plants, reptiles, birds and mammals, will be a living "book of nature" for the children and students to study from; and the deep and close relationship with nature which the children will develop by caring for these creatures will inspire them to protect and nourish their environment all their lives.

And PASAKA will be not only a Sanctuary for the endangered species of Asia and other tropical countries, but also a Research Center to study animal behaviour such as breeding habits, adaptation to other animals, territoriality, etc. Ultimately this Research Center will be affiliated with the neighbouring colleges and universities to serve as an extension of their conservation and wildlife studies programmes.

GLOBAL NETWORK

A global network not only of adults but also of children is now being formed to develop this Ecological Garden and preserve endangered plant and animal species from every corner of the earth.

We need your help - in gathering the endangered species from your area, and preserving them properly at PASAKA. Please join our network of concerned humans seeking to reserve the destruction and degradation of modern existence, and to cherish, with all our love, our universal family of life.

GLOBAL NEWS:

GEORGETOWN SECTOR (SOUTH AMERICA)

Nearly 500 people from all over South America and the world attended the 14th Global Ananda Marga Global Conference held in early February near Buenos Aires, Argentina. The beautiful scenic surroundings, brilliantly organized daily schedule and lively cultural programmes at night made the conference a great success. Several people were inspired to donate land and buildings for the organization's projects and 35 people dedicated themselves as whole time and local volunteers for Ananda Marga.

Along with lectures and discussions on social service work, collective meditations and other programs, a large procession drew the attention of thousands of local people as conference attendees marched through town. Commented one attendee: "I've never seen so many good people in one place in my life."

BERLIN SECTOR (WESTERN EUROPE)

England's fifth Ananda Marga school has just opened in London. The new primary school has 25 children enrolled and a waiting list for more. The school has been started due to the public demand from parents whose children attend the popular Ananda Marga kindergarten in London and want to continue their children in the Neo-Humanist educational system. Other Ananda Marga programs in London include a health food store, a free food and blanket program for the needy and the regional office for Ananda Marga schools in Birmingham, Leeds and Liverpool.

DELHI SECTOR (INDIA AND SOUTH ASIA)

Over 15,000 people from all over India and the globe attended the January Dharma Maha Cakra gathering (great circle of righteousness) at Ananda Nagar in West Bengal where Ba'ba's special darshans focused on the topic of Microvita.

At the gathering, thousands of new publications were sold, focusing attention at over 40 new books published by Ananda Marga in the last six months. After the gathering, the worker spread out throughout India holding seminars based on the new principles of PROUT, Microvita and Neo-Humanism recently given by Ba'ba'.

MANILA SECTOR (SOUTHEAST ASIA)

A coconut processing plant is now being set up in Davao, Philippines as part of the network of commercial products under the Lotus label distributed by Ananda Marga in the Philippines. This plant has a unique system to utilize the entire coconut products. Filipino inventor, Atty Vicente Gabriel, was so impressed with his tour of the Ananda Marga Training Center in Davao that he promised to help set up the plant and donated all his patented inventions to Ananda Marga. These are based on appropriate technology and are labor intensive to employ and benefit large numbers of impoverished villagers.

Recently, a Certificate of Appreciation was awarded to Ananda Marga in Davao City by the Philippine Information Agency of the Office of the Philippine President. The certificate recognizes the ten Ananda Marga schools in the area, two large children's homes, continual relief efforts for war refugees and many mass feeding programs. Ananda Marga was cited for its "invaluable contribution to the cause of the public service."

Acharya Ajiitananda

HOW DID THIS ANANDA MARGA DIE IN POLICE CUSTODY?

Since his early childhood in an Ananda Marga children's home Acharya Ajiitananda Avadhuta had been imbued with spiritual values inspired to follow the path of service and sacrifice in life. So, when he finished school he dedicated his life to the service of Humanity as a sannyasi (monk) of Ananda Marga.

In his ten years as a missionary worker, he served poor and needy people in many parts of India, and he spread India's timeless message of spiritual peace in the West as well. Europeans remember him lovingly as the "Dada" (respected brother" who moved them to tears with his vibrating songs of spiritual bliss. Hundreds of flood-stricken Indians remember him as the strong and cheerful Dada who tirelessly carried their children and elders out of their flooded houses and, long after midnight--without stopping to eat himself--cooked and served them food with his own hands.

His most recent posting was in Siliguri in West Bengal, Where he opened three kindergarten and primary schools for indigent children, and ran numerous adult education centers where he taught the illiterate to read and write.

And now he is dead--kicked and beaten to death by police in a small police lock-up in Siliguri. One can only imagine with horror the tortures which must have been inflicted on such a robust and energetic young man to have caused his early death, at the age of twenty-eight years.

THE PERSECUTION OF ANANDA MARGA IN WEST BENGAL

Since its inception in 1955, Ananda Marga has been steadily pursuing its aims of self-development for the individual through spiritual culture, and to the whole human society.

And since 1967, the Marxist Communist Party of West Bengal (CPM) has been maligning and opposing Ananda Marga because its unflinching moral principles and spiritual values of life are totally antithetical to the atheism and crude materialism of the communists. At every stage, the CPM government has placed countless obstacles in the way of Ananda Marga's efforts to render service to the suffering.

ARREST

On January 17, Acharya Ajiitananda was arrested from his primary school and kept in police custody. There he was mercilessly tortured to extract a confession from him implicating Ananda Marga in certain false cases which the CPM concocted. He adamantly refused to confess. He was so brutally beaten that his body was almost immobilized. Not a single portion of his body remained intact--his knees were smashed, his legs crippled, his head battered.

On hearing the news of his brutal torture, the Ananda Marga organisation moved the High Court of Calcutta with a writ petition filed on 21st January which was fixed for hearing on January 25th. The police realised that their tortures would be exposed to the Judiciary and to the world as soon as Acharya Ajiitananda was produced in court. Ajiitananda was found dead in police lock-up in the early morning of January 24th. The police promptly submitted contradictory reports of his death to various newspapers--one that he died of poisoning, and another that he committed suicide.

FURTHER ARRESTS AT CONDOLENCE MEETING

On February 1st, thousands of Margiis from adjacent districts of Calcutta assembled for a rally to protest Ajitananda's untimely death and the government's inaction.

While the margiis were dispersing peacefully, the police suddenly started beating them mercilessly and without provocation, injuring many. Even nuns and woman were not spared. Two monks, Acharya Narayananda Avadhuta and Acharya Divyarupananda Avadhuta, were held under illegal detention after they were granted bail along with the other 44 Margiis. These two monks faced the brunt of the police's murderous assault because they led the condolence procession and were members of the delegation submitting a memorandum against the police and CPM government, to the Assistant Secretary to the Governor of West Bengal.

Although both monks were seriously injured, instead of being sent to hospital for proper treatment, they were taken in police remand in connection with a bombing incident of 1986, in which Ananda Marga had no connection whatsoever. After more than a year, during which times these two monks have been moving freely about Calcutta engaging in their social service activities, without the least police interest in them, why have the police suddenly decided that they are the culprits?

(On February 25th, Dadas Narayananda and Divyarupananda were released on bail.)

OUR DEMANDS (shortened form)

Acharya Ajitananda Avadhuta will not become just another statistic in West Bengal's bloody history of police violence. He must become a symbol of the struggle of righteous people not only in West Bengal but throughout the world, to stop the atrocities committed by the police against the innocent.

We demand the following immediate actions:

- * The dismissal of the corrupt government of West Bengal that has loosed terror and violence throughout the state.
- * A fundamental change in the criminal law of the country to protect civilians from the brutal atrocities of the police.
- * An impartial Inquiry Commission headed by a Supreme Court Justice to investigate Ajiitananda's murder.
- * Immediate dismissal and exemplary punishment of all the police officers and other concerned with the murder.
- * Unconditional release of all Ananda Marga members falsely implicated in concocted cases including the monks recently arrested in Calcutta and full security for the lives of all members of Ananda Marga, and protection of their properties throughout West Bengal.

A REVOLUTION IN AGRICULTURE

Baba has recently given great attention to the agricultural arena. For several years, there have been programs to develop extensive botanical gardens. The gardens in India contain 40,000 species. Over the last year Ba'ba' has been distributing good quality plants, particularly fruits, to various parts of the world for agricultural production. In January, Ba'ba' has started following the activities of the FARM and FARPRO departments of Ananda Marga very closely, asking for daily reports of progress in implementing their activities.

Specifically, in mid-February, a contest was held to judge fruits and vegetables from all over the world. These included radish, lettuce, cabbage, cauliflower, egg plant, sugar beets, crysanthamum, roses, potatoes and peas. These contests are expected to continue. The following is from a letter received from Dada Vishvarupananda in Calcutta:

"Yesterday Ba'ba' was the judge in a competition to select the best produce from our farms around the world. It was amusing to see Ba'ba' handling fruits and vegetables and praising them for their various qualities. Ba'ba' was very please to see the colorful display of produce which would have put the fruit and vegetables store holders at Gariahat market to shame. The first three prizes (these prizes were very functional - tools for farm!!!) for all around quality went to farms in India."

The second major new area, involves the establishment of 40 new Agricultural Research Stations in India. Ba'ba' has given specific quidlines for plants to be produced and researched. The list seemsto include all types of plant agriculture including: patatoes, arrow-root summer and winter vegetables, grains and legumes.

The FARM DEPARTMENT is responsible for encouraging the development of model farms, both for research and education and for the production of food and other plant agricultural products, such as jute. The Farm Department should be teaching progressive techniques and raising the level of agricultural productivity on a regional basis. The Farm Department deals with agriculture, gardening, sericulture, bee-keeping, irrigation and veterinary work. It's mandate also includes plant and soil protection, conservation and ecology. This department is also responsible to contact other progressive educator and research workers, fostering cooperation on common goals such as conservation. Other responsibilities include the production of newsletters and printed materials about modern and sound farming techniques and training of people in organic gardening.

FARPRO -- The Farm Products Section

The work of FARPRO includes the refinement or preparation of food products (such as tomato sauce) and the marketing, both wholesale and retail, of farm products. Retailing might be through FARPRO shops or other outlets. FARPRO also includes the effort to bring all cultivatable land into production. Farms may be classed into four categories : Those in which the total production or its money value is sufficient to meet the needs for staple foods and cloth for all our relief homes in the same district. Second, those whose production can meet the "snack" costs of the homes. Third, those which do not meet these production levels, but which are economically self-supporting and lastly, those non-economic holding which can produce something. The intent is to provide as much support for our relief operations and children's homes from the farm production as possible.

Another responsibility of FARPRO is "Water for all land", which involves the development of water supplies and conservation measures in regions where there is shortage of water.
